FRESH AIR

We believe Rose Bushes in storage must have it; in fact, without ample "Fresh Air" mildew and Storage Rot will creep in.

Accordingly this year we installed a 10-horse power fan with large pipes or flues leading to all parts of our Storage Cellar, some 13,000 sq. feet. This fan is operated several times a week at day-break, the coldest part of the 24 hours. This forces new air to every part of the Cellar and insures the "Fresh Air" the plants in storage seem to require.

And again, for the "ounce of prevention" we occasionally ask this fan to distribute a small quantity of sulphur, the very finest obtainable. It certainly can do it well.

On the next page is pictured hot beds, some 1200 sash, office and packing house with storage cellar below.

Our current season's entire production was in the beds at the time this picture was taken.
